Ballygannon Woods Trail

Location: Ballygannon Woods, Co Wicklow

Route Length: 2km

Parking: Car park at trail head

- GPS 52.944, -6.237 (type into Google Maps)

The Ballygannon Woods Trail loop walk is a perfect way to enjoy Ireland's native woodlands and our natural heritage.

Forming Part of the Clara Vale Nature Reserve, these woodlands are the second largest Oak forest in Ireland and have ancient origins that link back to the native forests that covered Ireland thousands of years ago.

'Dedicated forever to the people of Ireland', these woods also form part of the People's Millennium Forest project, when in the year 2000, over 1.6 million native broad-leaved tree trees were planted, one for each household. Planted to help restore and manage our native forests, the native trees included oak, birch, alder, ash and more. During various times of the year wild honeysuckle, bilberry, primroses, bluebells and violets grow on the forest floor.

The name Ballygannon in Irish is Baile na gCanonach which means 'The town or dwelling of the canons' and is where Canons (clerics from a cathedral) owned lands in the 12th century. To the south of the woods is the village of Rathdrum and to the east is the Avonmore River which flows through these woodlands.

Clara Vale Trail

Location: Clara Vale, Co Wicklow

Route Length: 4km

Parking: Car park - GPS 52.967, -6.260

(type into Google Maps)

Have you ever imagined what Ireland looked like 10,000 years ago? Well look no further, this is real wilderness.

The Clara Vale Trail follows the Avonmore Way walk through the Vale of Clara Nature Reserve, a 550 acre forest of native Irish trees and what most of Ireland looked like after last Ice Age.

Along the banks of the Avonmore River you will be surrounded by the lords of the forest, Oak and Scots Pine towering above you, Holly, Hazel, Birch, and Willow trees lower down and Honeysuckle, Bilberry, Wood Sorrel and Bluebells on the woodland floor.

Keep an eye out for the bird and bat boxes on some trees and the wide range of wildlife that live in these woods including birds such as long-eared owls, tree-creepers, woodcock, redstarts, buzzards and the Great Spotted Woodpecker, which has recently arrived back to Ireland.

This is why Clara Vale Forest is so exciting. This is the Trails Passports longest walk and the only non-loop trail where you must return on the same route or need a second car at another trail head.

Deputy's Pass Trail

Location: Deputy's Pass, Co Wicklow

Route Length: 2km

Parking: Car park - GPS 52.948, -6.164

(type into Google Maps)

Taking the Deputy's Pass Trail, the shorter of the loop walks through the old oak woodlands, lets you enjoy one of the last remaining pockets of the vast forests that once covered much of ancient Wicklow.

Established as a Nature Reserve in 1982, the valley is inhabited by a range of trees, plants and wildlife along the Potter River. With trees such as Oak, Beech, Birch, Holly, Hazel and Rowan and plants including Woodrush, Bilberry, Blueberry and Wood Sorrel on the woodland floor, the local wildlife is varied and includes birds such as Kestrels and Wrens and amphibians including the Smooth Newt and Common Frog.

The name Deputy's Pass dates back over 400 years when the English Tudor Monarchy was trying to defeat the local Gaelic O'Byrne Clan. At the time, Wicklow's landscape was much different with no roads as we know them and dense woodland. The Lord Deputy was said to have cut a Pass through the wooded valley for his troops and supplies and hence the name. However, it was the O'Byrne Clan who used new Pass to ambush their enemies!

Built in 1779 by Samuel Hayes, Avondale House was the birthplace and home of Charles Stewart Parnell (1846–1891), one of the leading political leaders in Irish history. Samuel Hayes collected and planted a range of tree species from all over the world and made Avondale the birthplace of Irish Forestry where training and research has been undertaken since.

Laragh - Glenmacnase River

Location: Laragh, Co Wicklow

Route Length: 2km

Parking: Southeast of St Kevin's Church
- GPS 53.0106, -6.3026 (type into Google Maps)

Perfect for a family walk, the Laragh Loop Trail is set in one of Ireland's few native woodlands near the village of Laragh. The area is blessed with a wide variety of flora and fauna and the trail itself is a mixture of surfaces and is easily accessible. You may even catch a glimpse of a red squirrel or even a great spotted woodpecker.

Laragh or An Láithreach is located in the heart of the Wicklow Mountains and only 2km from the famous Glendalough, where St. Kevin started a Monastery in the 6th Century.

Step into the past as you walk through the Glenmasnass River Valley which was carved out by huge mountain sized glaciers during the last Ice Age, 10,000 years ago!

Rising from these wooded Valleys of Oak and Scots Pine, are Wicklow's gently rolling and rounded granite mountains. Around the year 1000AD, the largest Viking ship ever built at 30m/100feet long used oak timber from this area.

The nearby Military Road was built in the early 1800s and leads to the scenic Sally Gap mountain pass and Glenmacnass Waterfall to the north of Laragh.
